

English-taught program for international students in AY 2018

The Graduate School of Engineering at Kobe University has just opened an English-taught Master's Program for international students. We provide classes in English for each field including Architecture, Civil Engineering, Electric and Electronic Engineering, Mechanical Engineering, and Chemical Science and Engineering, enabling students to earn a Master's Degree in all departments. Professors who provide English-taught classes (Category A) will also offer academic supervision for international students who wish to study cutting-edge sciences in English.

Entrance examinations will be held for international students in English and/or Japanese. For non-Japanese speakers the examination will be prepared in English after consulting with the department faculty. You are welcome to enroll in our Master's Program to study a wide range of engineering fields. Details of entrance examinations are available at the links below.

Admission examination for Master's Program (Enrollment in April 2018)

Admission examinations for the Master's Program will be carried out by each department.

We categorize the classes in each department as follows. International students can obtain credits from all classes. However, for non-Japanese speakers, classes in categories A and B are recommended for understanding each specialized scientific area.

A: All contents are provided in English. Professors who provide Category A classes may accept international students for supervising in English.

B: Textbooks and/or board writing are prepared in English. Lecture language is Japanese.

C: Textbooks and/or board writing are prepared in Japanese/English. Lecture language is Japanese.

D: All contents are provided in Japanese.

Supervisors

The Graduate School of Engineering designates supervisors who can instruct students in English-taught programs as "SE" faculty members.

*SE: Supervisor in English. SE members teach category A classes and accept students in the English-taught Program for supervision.

*LE: Lecturer in English: LE members teach category B classes. They provide English-taught materials in their own classes.
